Mr. Gray was sitting at his desk, writing, when the door opened and a poorly dressed man of about twenty-five years of age walked in. Closing the door quietly, he wheeled one of the revolving chairs up to the desk and taking a seat, said:

"Is your name Gray?"

Receiving an affirmative answer, he assumed a threatening tone:

"Got any money?"

The lawyer was now thoroughly alarmed. He knew from the man's general manner, his vacant stare, that he had a crank to deal with.

He was asked who sent him there and how he obtained the name, and finally admitted that he had read it on the office door. He said he was out of work and wanted assistance ommissioners of Accounts Will Not Dig Deep for a While.

Although the Commissioners of Accounts have already commenced an examination of the books in the Sheriff's office, it can be stated as a fact that hey will not put the probe in very deep in any of the departments until after the subordinate force is changed.

The examination in the Sheriff's office merely takes in the books, and is made at the beginning of each Sheriff's term. The books of all the departments will be examined in the same manner, but if corruption is revealed, it will be found, it is thought, as a result of the examination of witnesses, which will not be done until the Commissioners of Accounts have selected their staff of employees.
